At Eventide

I know that I could never write
A poem as lovely as the night.
Over the earth, cool mists arise
And soften the hue of the starlit skies.

The fragrant odor of flowers and grass Blend with the breezes as they pass, And out in the shadows that lie beyond, Insects hum a quavering song.

Above the vague outlines of the hill,
A night hawk cries and then all is still.
And all things that rest on the dewy sod
Are hushed by the spirit of peace and God.

My I lift my soul up to the height
Of the starry heavens that crown the night
And gather the joys of that world apart
Into the depths of the human heart.

As I wonder what mysteries lie unknown
Where the moon swings on through his course alone,
I know that no poet could ever write
A poem as lovely as the night.

from "Leaves of Yesterday", Copyright Elvina Granlie McNamara, written at age 17.